

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of immunization identification comprising filling a first syringe with a first immunization dosage, applying a first adhesive-backed strip having a first color to the first syringe, injecting the first dosage into a patient at a first injection site, applying a
5 second adhesive-backed strip having a first color to the first injection site after the injection and applying a third adhesive-backed strip having the first color to a medical office chart of the patient. An immunization identification system, comprising a first series of stickers all having a first color corresponding to a first immunization, and a second series of stickers
10 all having a second color corresponding to a second immunization. The first and second series of stickers being adapted to be applied to first and second syringes, to first and second patient injection sites, and to a medical chart of the patient.